

SALMON P. CHASE, OF OHIO.

Subject to the decision of the National Convention.

The Defalcation of Mr. Fowler.

The whole political community have been astonished at certain developments which have taken place, disclosing the fact that Mr. Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster of New York, is a defaulter to the amount of over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and that Mr. F. has desecrated. Such, however, was the fact, and the N. Y. Tribune says that, to those acquainted with his habits, the only wonder was that the crash did not come earlier. Mr. Fowler was a jovial, genial, hearty fellow, fond of place, power, and patronage. For many years he lived entirely beyond his means, and his best friends saw that he was all the while digging a pit into which he would in the end most assuredly fall. Since last Saturday Marshall Rynders has been in search of Mr. Fowler, but without success. All that is known of him is, that on Sunday morning, at two o'clock, he hastily left the New-York Hotel, where for many years he had resided, and taking with him a few necessary articles of clothing, went, no one knows whither. The Treasury Department claim recently to have discovered a deficiency of $165,564.31 in his accounts; but, if the truth were known, it would be found not only that this deficiency has been of long standing, but that it has been known to the present Administration from the outset. According to rumor, Mr. Fowler entered upon his duties of Postmaster under Gen. Pierce, with a load of debt, the result of that generosity which led him to squander his private fortune on political associates. That debt he is said to have liquidated from the Post-Office funds, borrowing, meanwhile, right and left, to make good the deficiency thus created.

Through the assistance of friends in and out of Tammany Hall, he was enabled to carry this debt for years; but his extravagant habits, and liberal entertainment of brother politicians from all sections of the country, to whom he extended the most generous hospitality, daily augmented the heavy burden under which he staggered. In 1856, when it became necessary to carry Pennsylvania for Mr. Buchanan, he labored assiduously, as a member of the New-York Hotel Committee, and drew heavy drafts upon the funds of his department to aid in his election. How much he involved himself in this way is known only to himself and the "gray-haired old public-functionary" at Washington; but from what we can learn it was a very large sum.

It is said that this fact was known to Mr. J. B. at the time, and it was for this reason that he was reappointed Postmaster. There was, we think, a decided opposition to his confirmation by the Senate; and he was not carried through until Mr. Buchanan had exhausted all his endeavors in his behalf, and his personal friends in this city had lent him funds enough to cook his accounts up so that they would pass muster. Knowing as he did how Mr. Fowler stood, and why he had become thus embarrassed, Mr. Buchanan could not then well do otherwise than reappoint him, and labor for his confirmation. If he had not done so, the crash must have come at that time, and Mr. Fowler's downfall would have fastened a stigma upon the new Administration.

From that time to this Mr. Fowler has been leading a life of misery. Conscious that he was heavily behind in his cash accounts, his utmost endeavors have been directed toward making a fair quarterly balance-sheet. He is said to have managed to do this by borrowing; here and there, of his friends, oftentimes at most unscrupulous interest, large sums of money, for a few days, to be repaid from the income of the Post-Office. His expenditures at Charleston were heavy. He cast everything upon the hazard of the die, and his favorite Douglas failed. Of course, he fell into disgrace with the Administration, who have long known his desperate situation, and he found, that in falling from grace, he had lost the means of making good his deficiencies. Like the rats who desert the sinking ship, the money-lenders saw that he was on the wane, and when he besought them for the accustomed unscrupulous accommodation, they were "short." Hence he was unable to meet his liabilities. This is the story of his career and downfall, and said to be the most probable of the many that are afloat in relation to this most startling event.

Another story is, that in the plection of 1856, Mr. Fowler drew largely upon the Post-Office fund to favor the success of Mr. Buchanan. When the latter assumed office means were found to cook over the New-York Post-Office deficiency, in view of the use to which the money had been put. But, when in the course of time Mr. Buchanan found that Mr. Fowler and his friends, instead of laboring through all time for the interests of J. B., let their preferences for Douglas drop out last Summer, vague hints were thrown out at Washington that there was trouble in the New-York Post-Office; that Mr. Fowler was a heavy defaulter, and that something awful was going to happen. These rumors were heard quite frequently a year ago from numerous sources. Later, just before the Charleston Convention, these stories were again noised abroad. But by prudent management the ghost was laid.

Mr. Fowler and his friends, however, heedless of the danger and the warnings, went to Charleston and voted for Mr. Douglas. Thenceforth J. B. became the sworn foe of all the Douglas host, and we have the first instalment of his vengeance in the disgrace of the Postmaster. Friends went to Washington last week to avert the blow; but the vindictive old gentleman at the head of public affairs would not withhold the stroke one moment longer.

A boy, 7 years of age, in Liberty Township, Iowa, went into the fields where his father was at work, to carry him some water, and afterwards laid down unknown to his father; upon a stack of refuse straw, and went to sleep. On leaving the field at night, wishing to remove the straw, the farmer set it on fire and went home, leaving it burning. Missing his son, and hap- pening to think of the straw stack, he returned just in time to find him burned to a crisp.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

Prospects of Seward.
[Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune.]
CHICAGO, May 15, 1880.
Delegations are organizing, and canvassing is going on amid much excitement. The opponents of Seward are confident of defeating him, but his friends have greater confidence of securing his nomination. They expect from 80 to 90 votes on the first ballot, and then perhaps the support of portions of all opposing States when they break from local candidates. Efforts are making to adopt the unit rule in doubtful delegations; if these are successful Seward will be defeated. Everything depends upon obduracy and the union of Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, Indiana and Illinois.

If they show any signs of wavering, Seward will be successful. The Indiana delegation will vote on the first ballot solid for Bates; Illinois for Lincoln; Ohio for Chase, afterward dividing between Bates and Lincoln. Only three or four Ohioans are for Seward.

Virginia is reported to have gone over to Seward, but will give a majority vote to Bates. Kentucky is divided between Lincoln and Bates.

Lincoln may get Wisconsin and Minnesota early, and he threatens Bates in Indiana, and elsewhere. The vote of Connecticut is the shrewdest and most impartial observer predict Seward's success.

The Japanese.
WASHINGTON, May 15, 1880.
The precise character of the Mission of the Japanese was not ascertained till last night, when they produced a letter dated Yeddo, handsomely written in English, in which it is stated that the Princess come hither as Envoy Extraordinary, with the request that they be presented to the President through the State Department. This letter was probably prepared at the instance of Consul-General Harris.

This morning Mr. Ledyard was at the quarters of the Japanese, arranging for the official visit to the State Department tomorrow, consequently their reception by the President will not probably take place till Thursday.

To-day the scribes of the Embassy are busily engaged in writing dispatches announcing their arrival with incidents of the voyage, to be sent to San Francisco by the pony express, and thence to Japan.

They have asked for more private quarters at Willard's Hotel, and that meals be sent to their rooms. This has been accorded.

Capt. Dupont is very assiduous in his attentions to promote their comfort.

The Fatal Picnic Party.

A person who was present at the terrible catastrophe which occurred at Boykin's Mill, near Camden, South Carolina, on the 6th instant, the particulars of which we have published, communicates the following in reference to the disaster, to the Charleston Courier of May 15th:—

All went on well till 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when Mr. Alexander and a few others went off a few hundred yards, and about 60 of the gay, light-hearted young people stepped into a large flat, and taking their violins and guitars along, pushed off some 50 yards from the shore. The flat ran on a snag that penetrated its bottom. The afflicted girls ran to the end. It sank, and 60 human beings were struggling in the deep water. A panic seized them all. Strong men, good swimmers, ladies and children, all lost their presence of mind. The shrieks of those on shore and the one loud scream of those on the flat, called persons from every direction. Mr. Alexander rushed in and rescued four ladies. Feeling a body under his feet, he pulled it up. It proved to be his daughter Minnie. Every means was resorted to for her resuscitation, but it was too late. She was dead. O! what a time we had yesterday! Such a hurry for graves! and such hard work to obtain coffins—twenty-six in all. Few persons slept on Saturday night. The cars went down for the bodies. Many citizens went down on them. The pond was drained. Ten bodies were taken to the Methodist Church, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bodies were conveyed thence in three long wagons. It was a heart-rending sight. Fifteen young persons, from 15 to 20 years of age, were drowned. There are several funerals to take place to-day. It is a day of fasting in the Methodist church, and the Council decreed that all business should be suspended. One little boy saved so many persons that the boys at school are making up a purse to buy him a medal.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY.—The Japanese Embassy have arrived at Washington. On Sunday the Philadelphia, with the Naval Commission and invited guests, proceeded from Norfolk to Hampton Roads, where the Roanoke was lying at anchor. On arriving on board the frigate, Capt. Dupont was formally presented to the ambassador, showing his commission from the President, and introducing in turn his several associates. Mr. Ledyard, as the representative of the State Department, welcomed the Embassy to our country, to which the interpreter briefly but intelligibly responded. The proceedings were conducted with great dignity and were marked by apparent reciprocal confidence. The interpreters of the Embassy mixed freely among the visitors, and responded to their congratulations in tolerably good English. The Japanese were then transferred from the Roanoke to the Philadelphia, and the latter proceeded on her way to Washington. On reaching Old Point, the ambassadors landed at the fort, and were escorted around the parapet, their artists sketching outline views of almost everything inside, as well as the roads and shipping outside with astonishing rapidity. The embassy and attaches are delighted with everything. As the steamer passed up the Potomac, the Japanese artists were busy taking views of every point. When the steamer neared Mount Vernon the wheels were stopped and the bell tolled, while the band played a plaintive air. The Japanese artists took sketches of the mansion and grounds. Meantime the interpreters informed the strangers of the history of George Washington. Yesterday morning the distinguished strangers arrived at Washington, where they were received by the civil and military authorities.

EUROPEAN NEWS.—The English papers by the Fulton at New York contain little of general interest. The Sailor's Home at Liverpool was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 20th ult. Of the inmates twelve were missing, when the muster roll was called the next day. The building cost £30,000. Constable Hardacre, who engaged in carrying up a hose, was killed by the breaking of the ladder. The Paris correspondent of the London Morning Herald states that the absence of the Emperor from the grand ball of the Hotel d'Albe was the discovery of a conspiracy. The London Times is not quite satisfied with the arrangements which resulted in the Japanese making their first visit to the United States. A definitive treaty of peace between Spain and Morocco was signed on the 26th of April. Marshall O'Donnell returned to Madrid on the 30th, where he was received with great enthusiasm. One division of the Spanish army will continue to occupy Tangier, until the payment of the stipulated indemnity is completed, which will be within the year. The Spanish ministry is divided in opinion regarding the proper course to pursue towards the princes compromised in the rash attempt of Ortega. The majority favor the passage by the Cortes of an act of general indemnity, even before the trial of the delinquents, at the same time re-asserting the right of Queen Isabella to the crown. The death of Baron Bruck, late Austrian Minister of Finance, continues to occupy the attention of the Viennese journals. Some of the papers defend his memory against the aspersions caused by his spiritism, and others attack him, claiming that he was an honest man, and incapable of betraying his trust.

LOCAL ITEMS.

SCHULTZ'S ORCHESTRA.—We are gratified to learn, has been again engaged for the coming season in Newport. Last year, this orchestra played alternately at the Fillmore and Atlantic Houses, but, by a now and excellent arrangement, this season they are to play at the Fillmore and Belle Vue Houses. Mr. Schultze has this winter and spring been connected, as leader, with the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, which has been concerting through the New England, Middle and Southern States, with the highest praise from the very best of judges. The same gentleman has been known here for years, as one of the original "Germanians," and as a successful composer of several works of merit, which have had a large measure of popular favor.

We congratulate the proprietors of these two popular establishments upon this arrangement, and have no doubt that they will find it mutually advantageous and pleasant, besides being very convenient for their guests.

THE NEW YORK LIGHT GUARD COMING TO NEWPORT.—The old Light Guard (Co. A, 71st Regiment), on Monday evening, voted unanimously to visit Newport on the coming 20th of June, to celebrate their thirty-third Anniversary. It is also understood that the celebrated "Tigers," of Boston, (Boston Light Infantry, Capt. Newton,) will meet their old friends the "L. G." at the same place, upon that occasion.
